Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Educational Opportunities in Chicago In the fall of 1910 representatives from a number of the larger educational agencies of the city of Chicago met with representatives of the Chicago Association of Commerce to devise means of increasing the efficiency of the educational work in the city. It was recognized that in the city of Chicago there are many libraries, museums, colleges, and other institutions of learning founded for the use of the people, which might considerably enlarge the utility of their public service. To develop these opportunities a central board was established, known as The Council for Library and Museum Extension. The work of the Council is outlined along two lines: publicity and co-ordination. Firstly, it is realized that the educational activities of the city must be called to the attention of the public more clearly. A centrally directed campaign of publicity has been planned to arouse the interest of the public in the educational opportunities freely offered at its very doors. The second task proposed lies in the coordination of the educational work of...
